The U.S. Department of Commerce, U.S. Commercial Service is organizing an Energy and Environment Trade Mission to Thailand, Malaysia, and the Philippines from September 15-21, 2013. This mission is designed to provide a powerful opportunity to explore these emerging markets, including briefings, networking receptions, and one-on-one business meetings with potential customers, partners and local representatives.

Renewable Energy Opportunities in the Region

The market for renewable energy is booming due to global trends moving away from fossil fuels to cleaner renewables. As governments try to gain energy independence, they have been turning to renewable forms of energy such as solar, hydro, wind, geothermal, and biomass in order to meet the rising demand, creating great opportunities through grants, loans, investment, and tax incentives.

Why Thailand, Malaysia, and the Philippines?

Foreign Government Involvement: Thailand's 20-year Energy Efficiency Development Plan aims to have renewable energy account for 25% of Thailand's total energy consumption by 2030, while Malaysia's Renewable Energy Act of 2011 enables the implementation of the Feed-in Tariff and establishes the Renewable Energy Fund.

U.S.-Asia-Pacific Comprehensive Energy Partnership: The United States will provide up to $6 billion to support the Partnership, with the Ex-Im Bank making $5 billion available in export credit financing, OPIC providing another $1 billion dollars in financing for renewable power and energy infrastructure projects, and assistance with upgrading grid efficiencies to accommodate renewable power.

Best Subsector Prospects: Solar equipment and technologies, wind, hybrid power systems, biomass, biogas, geothermal
